The Morris and Gwendolyn Cafritz Foundation is pleased to report on its grantmaking for its fiscal year 2019 – 2020. This year, the Foundation awarded more than $24 million to 413 nonprofit organizations in the Washington Metropolitan area.

In response to the Coronavirus Pandemic, the Cafritz Foundation committed $1 million to the Covid-19 Emergency Response Fund housed at the Greater Washington Community Foundation (GWCF). Launched in mid-March, GWCF coordinated the collaborative effort which, by the end of June, attracted more than 700 donors – a mix of individuals, corporate and private philanthropy, local and national funders – contributing gifts ranging from five dollars to $1 million.

The Fund worked quickly to place resources in the hands of communities. Several initial priorities were developed, including low-income communities of color, historically under-resourced communities, populations especially at risk of the virus and disproportionately affected. The fund also concentrated support on frontline workers, which meant prioritizing groups that were actively providing services to address the emergency.

The cornerstone of the Foundation’s work is improving the lives of all DC area residents. One of the ways we accomplish this is by supporting organizations that emphasize accessibility in its many different forms. In this year’s report, we would like to highlight some of the grantees whose work provides inclusive services and programs across diverse populations, needs and abilities.
In 2015, the Foundation helped fund ASL Connect, (American Sign Language) an online hub for the general public seeking ASL instruction at Gallaudet University. This year, Gallaudet received funding for ASL Connect: Families which is a new component of the online hub designed to benefit families with deaf children in the DC-metropolitan area. The program’s main objective is to provide guidance to parents and caregivers on strategies to foster connections with their deaf and hard-of-hearing children. It includes a series of free Early Visual Communication videos in English and Spanish. In addition, the Family Language Connector Program, also available in English and Spanish, is an online eight-week session of language learning support. These sessions allow parents and caregivers to practice communication and language skills with supportive deaf adults. During the pilot phase of this work, 100 percent of participating families indicated this was a critical resource in developing deeper connections with their children.

A grant to Medstar’s Washington Hospital Center continues the commitment for members of the community to access high quality heart health care. Building on the success of the Electrophysiology Lab (first supported by the Foundation in 2010 to supplement our previous contribution), this year’s grant expands and creates an integrated “Lab of the Future” by blending an advanced training facility with a technology incubator to improve clinical outcomes, while incorporating new science and education within the hospital’s Cardiac Electrophysiology Suite. The Lab works hand-in-hand with the Cafritz Foundation supported House Call Program, assisting frail elderly patients to remain residing in their homes and staving off visits to emergency rooms.

The Glen Echo Park Partnership for Arts and Culture manages the programs and facilities of Glen Echo Park, a major arts resource for the greater metropolitan region. Visited by 370,000 annually, the Partnership’s mission is to present vibrant artistic, cultural, and educational offerings at the Park and to promote the Park as a destination for the region’s diverse populations. The Partnership supports its 14 resident partners, including Adventure Theatre MTC (Cafritz grantee), with registration, marketing, and other facility-related services. This assistance enables partners to dedicate their expertise and resources toward their programs.

Recognizing the importance of sharing ideas, the Cafritz Foundation continues to work closely with our nonprofit and foundation colleagues. Last year, we invited other funders to hear from Dr. Jeremy Nobel of the Foundation for Art and Healing. Dr. Nobel’s Unlonely Project focuses on the growing health concerns of social isolation brought on by age, technology, bullying and other social issues.

The Smith Center for Healing and the Arts’ work focuses on using the arts as part of healing. Smith Center represents another example of an organization focused on accessibility in different ways: it helps cancer patients navigate the entire cancer experience from screening and diagnosis through treatment, recovery, and survivorship or bereavement; it offers free or low cost Cancer Support Programs, based on a ‘pay-what-you-can’ model, that are tailored to specific population’s needs; it brings its programs to patients rather than solely relying on its clinic; and it is working on offering its training program online to increase capacity.

Among first-time grantees, we supported Arts and Humanities organizations that bring arts to where people are in their lives physically, mentally, or financially. Art Stream uses the performing arts to assist with communication and socialization among the intellectually and developmentally challenged. In addition to classes, such as acting, improvisation, music and movement, it also offers workshops on public speaking, comedy and role-play. The classes and workshops are for all ages.
Additional first-time grantees in the Arts and Humanities include Tracy’s Kids, an organization that provides art therapy to young cancer patients and their families, and The MusicianShip, a free, year-round music education program for the District’s underserved youth. Our grant to Tracy’s Kids is for its primary program site at Children’s National Medical Center. One of the program’s unique features is that art therapy is integrated into the patient’s medical team and care plan. Along with bedside visits at the Bone Marrow Transplant Unit and an art therapy studio for patients to interact, art therapists act as a bridge between medical treatment and the emotional needs of children battling cancer.

The MusicianShip’s work focuses on two areas: Youth Development Programs and Community Enrichment Programs. Students can learn everything from playing percussion instruments to choral music. The programs include two summer camps, one for elementary and middle school students and the other for high school students, where they can learn about music, as well as the music industry and music media. The MusicianShip’s community programs are driven by the organization’s commitment to preserving and uplifting DC’s performing arts history.

Several longtime grantees also strive to make the arts accessible to people who are differently abled as producers of art while expanding their audiences, including Arts for the Aging, Art Enables and Bowen McCauley Dance. While being a regional service provider, Arts for the Aging is a national model that creates and delivers free, participatory, artist-led programs to physically and psychologically impaired seniors in adult day-care centers, nursing homes, assisted living facilities, community centers and low-income housing facilities throughout the DC metropolitan region. Art Enables hosts exhibitions at its own building, an off-site mixed-use residential and retail development, other venues and on its website, to create opportunities for people with and without disabilities to experience the arts together. For the last 11 years, Bowen McCauley Dance has provided free, weekly Dance for PD classes at nine locations in the region for people with Parkinson’s Disease and their care partners.

In environmental matters, the Foundation focused on organizations that not only bring awareness but also make environmental issues relevant to the population they serve. A first-time grant recipient, Friends of the Kenilworth Aquatic Gardens (FoKAG) is the philanthropic partner of the only aquatic garden in the National Park System. Located in Ward 7, FoKAG provides free and minimal cost NatureFest Spring Break Camps for the community’s children. Two other programs that FoKAG hosts to increase visibility and connect people to the Gardens are the Jazz and Lily Pads Concert Series (with East River Jazz), and its signature Lotus and Water Lily Festival in July, when the garden’s eponymous flowers are in full bloom and attracts more than 7,000 patrons from across the region.

American University, a long-time grantee, received a grant to support its Environment Beat in WAMU’s newsroom. WAMU is the only broadcast outlet in the DC region with an environment reporter informing its audience about the tangible effects of climate change on the region. WAMU’s vast reach of listeners in the region amplifies the work and areas of focus for the Foundation’s Environmental grantees. Another long-time grantee, the Student Conservation Association (SCA), is dedicated to developing environmental stewardship in young people and strives to make environmental issues relevant to the youth it serves. SCA received a grant to support the National Capital Region Community Programs.

Helping one student can benefit all the stakeholders – students, parents, teachers, the community – giving education one of its distinct characteristics. Assisting all students achieve or exceed their grade level reading goals and making education equitable are the driving forces behind two organizations that received their first Cafritz grants this year: Reading Partners and DC Dual Language Immersion.

Reading Partners provides a one-on-one literacy tutoring program for DC’s low-income elementary school population. Building upon the literacy skills students have, volunteers follow an Individualized Reading Plan tailored to each student’s particular needs and strengths. During the last school year, 95 percent of the kindergarten to second grade students mastered grade-appropriate foundational literacy skills, putting them on track to read at or above grade level by 3rd grade; 75 percent of third and fourth grade students demonstrated growth compared to a national group of peers.

Since its founding in 1961, The Ivymount School has served close to 12,000 children and young adults with intellectual disabilities, learning differences, speech and language impairment and autism spectrum disorder. The U.S. Department of Education has twice named the school a Blue Ribbon School of Excellence. A grant to The Ivymount School supports its School-to-Work Program with the goal to empower and support all students so they can become valued, confident and self-sufficient members of their communities. Last year, more than 150 Ivymount students, ages 14 to 21, worked at either in-school placements or more than 35 community-based partners.

Jill’s House offers respite care for parents and caregivers of children with special needs while providing a safe, fun, celebratory and loving environment for these youngsters. It offers weekend and weeknight programs and summer day camps. Across all programs, more than half of participating families pay nothing out of pocket, while others pay as little as $3 per hour for the time their children are in care.

The Barker Foundation, a private and comprehensive adoption agency, helps pregnant and prospective adoptive parents through the adoption process while also offering post-adoption services. Its Project Wait No Longer helps place older foster youth in permanent adoptive homes. The children range in age from 6- to 18-years old and often have lived in multiple foster homes. In 2019, 17 children in the program were placed in adoptive homes. More than 200 prospective families were trained and prepared to adopt, including individuals who received specialized training to parent an older child from the foster-care system.

Improving outcomes for children often involves helping their parents. Established in 1990, the mission of the Prince Georges County Child Resource Center is to help create healthy and nurturing environments for children by supporting their families and educating their caregivers. The Child Resource Center works with the underserved population in Prince George’s County through: education and training services; on-site childcare and transportation; a childcare resource and referral service; continuing education, training and technical assistance for their new and current childcare providers; and support to childcare providers and education program participants. Its Family Support Center reported that last year, of the 170 parents who received literacy training, 85 percent said their communication skills improved and 95 percent of their children improved their cognitive and language abilities.

To combat educational inequities and mass incarceration, the School Justice Project (SJP), another first-time grantee, provides advocacy and legal support for children with special needs and their parents. By integrating special education law into the juvenile and criminal justice systems, SJP removes barriers to education for older, court-involved students with disabilities, ensuring they can access a quality education, both during incarceration and throughout reentry.
Two other civil legal aid providers also received first-time grants. The Homeless Persons Representation Project received a grant to support free legal services to low-income individuals who are homeless or at risk of homelessness. The First Shift Justice Project (FSJP) addresses the legal needs of pregnant women and working parents, primarily mothers. FSJP focuses on pregnancy discrimination, access to reasonable accommodations, paid sick days and family medical leave, and sexual harassment and domestic violence in the workplace.

For the past three years, the Foundation has collaborated with Washington Regional Association of Grantmakers to bring nationally recognized philanthropic leaders to DC to highlight trends, challenges and opportunities that influence the nonprofit field. The Cafritz Lecture on Philanthropy series welcomed Rukaiyah Adams of the Meyer Memorial Trust in 2018 to present The Future of Philanthropy is in the Endowment. The discussion focused on aligning and engaging endowments in the delivery of a foundation’s mission. Grant Oliphant of the Heinz Endowments offered the next annual lecture, What Courageous Philanthropy Looks Like in 2019 and encouraged local grantmakers to think beyond their typical funding traditions. In 2020, Vanessa Daniel of Groundswell Fund, discussed increasing grants to grassroots organizations and leaders in her talk The Transformational Power of Investing in Women of Color.

I would like to thank our Board of Directors and Advisory Board Members for their ongoing commitment and support of the Foundation’s work, and the work of the hundreds of nonprofits that make life better for the residents, workers and visitors of DC and the region. I would also like to thank the staff of the Foundation for their continued dedication and ongoing assistance to the hundreds of nonprofits in this report and those past or not yet funded, in this difficult time.

The Morris and Gwendolyn Cafritz Foundation was incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia in 1948. The Foundation awards grants only to charitable, educational and cultural institutions exempt from taxation under the Internal Revenue Code. The general policy is to concentrate grants to organizations operating within the Greater Washington Metropolitan Area, with projects of direct assistance to the District of Columbia and its environs. Grants generally are not made for capital purposes, endowments or to individuals. Support for projects will be limited as to time, and it is not the general policy to commit for more than one year at a time.

Detailed information about the application process is available from the Foundation by telephone or through the website. To submit an application, please go to www.cafritzfoundation.org.
